Audiology

Au.D.

Ph.D.

Audiologists provide comprehensive diagnostic and rehabilitative services for all areas of auditory, vestibular, and related disorders. These services are provided to individuals

- across the entire age span from birth through adulthood;
- from diverse language, ethnic, cultural, and socioeconomic backgrounds; and
- who may have multiple disabilities.

Program Description

The Doctor of Audiology (Au.D.) degree provides an academic and clinical foundation for professionals providing services to children and adults with hearing impairments and qualifies graduates for certification and licensure in the profession of audiology.

The Doctor of Philosophy (Ph.D.) degree provides an individualized broad-based education within which a specific area of scholarly expertise is developed and which culminates in a mentored program of basic or applied research in either speech-language pathology or audiology.

Graduates of the clinical programs meet all requirements of the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association's Certificate of Clinical Competence (CCC).

Admission Requirements

To be considered for admission, an applicant must:

- complete a baccalaureate degree from an accredited college or university. If the baccalaureate degree is not in Communication Sciences and Disorders (CSD), a minimum of 12 semester hours of prerequisites in CSD may be completed in residence;

- have a 3.0 cumulative GPA on the last 60 hours of coursework applied to the degree or a minimum 3.0 GPA on graded graduate coursework of 12 or more hours. The College of Allied Health does not recognize academic forgiveness nor reprieve policies. All attempts of a course are included in the calculation of GPAs;
- take the Graduate Record Examination (GRE). GRE's web address is www.gre.org;
- complete an on-site interview; and
- earn a minimum score of 600 (paper-based) or 100 (internet-based) within two years prior to application on the Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL) if English is the second language. TOEFL's web address is www.toefl.org.
