A student may receive a zerograde for exhibiting a deficiency in demonstrating the MIRS Department Essential Competencies in the classroom, the laboratory or the clinical setting. The assignment of a zerograde may result in failure of the course in which the behavior is demonstrated which may in turn result in dismissal from the program. The behavior may also result in charges of academic misconduct, and/or be reported as unprofessional behavior through the student professional behavior in an academic program policy.

The assignment of a zerograde is intended to help students identify professional behavior and meet the expectations of behavior in the classroom, the laboratory, and/or the clinical setting. A deficiency in behavior noted in the area(s) below has been identified and needs to be improved by the student.

NOTE: The following listing is not considered comprehensive, but suggests examples of evidence of deficiency in the Departments Essential Competencies. Additional discussions and references regarding appropriate and inappropriate professional behavior may be found in the "Department Essential Competencies Document"; the "Department of Medical Imaging and Radiation Sciences Student Handbook"; the "College of Allied Health Student Handbook"; the OUHSC Faculty Handbook; individual Course Syllabi and/or individual Clinic Notebooks/Paperwork.
